24th Sunday in Ordinary Time

Lest We Forget

Greetings.

I am writing this on Friday morning, 11 September, 25 years after the infamous attacks on New York City, the Pentagon, and the senseless deaths of forty-four men, women and children in a field in Shanksville, PA. As has happened every year since that day, our nation has observed with solemnity through memorials and tributes to the victims and survivors of the attacks. The usual politicians give the usual speeches. News stations air montages of the terrible events of that day. Some outlets make the effort to show the brave efforts of first responders and everyday citizens who responded to the need for help. 2,977 people who were just going about their normal day breathed their last that day. 441 of them were police officers, fire fighters, and paramedics, not to mention the thousands who have died since from toxic exposure at Ground Zero and the Pentagon. And almost every video or article finishes with the same thought, “Never forget”.

I remember the day after the attacks. Amidst the fear, anger, and confusion something beautiful happened. The people of the United States became more united that ever. Most of the members of Congress stood together on the steps of the US Capitol in prayer, singing God Bless America in one of the most off-key but heart-stirring renditions I have ever heard. We were one because everyone seemed to understand that this wasn’t an attack on Republicans or Democrats; it wasn’t an attack on any single racial or ethnic group; and it wasn’t an attack on a particular way of belief or faith. It was an attack on what it means to be an American. My fear is, we seem to have forgotten what that day meant and still means for our nation and way of life.

This morning, right after Mass, I was watching the memorial reading of the names at Ground Zero. Imagine my horror when the camera settled on a sitting member of Congress and the mayor of New York City joking and laughing together as the families and loved ones of the victims read the names. There is a growing number of young people, locally and throughout the country, who cannot articulate even the simplest notion of what occurred on that day. There is even a growing number of people who are of the opinion that the attacks either never happened or that they were staged by our own government. We have forgotten.

We now live in a nation where any disagreement of opinion on politics, life choices, or any other issue is immediately interpreted as being a hater of the other person or being “phobic” of them. It seems that we can no longer sanely discuss our differences without devolving into ad hominem or violence. We abuse the sacred Freedom of Speech to disparage one another, expecting that our freed of speech means freedom from the consequences of that speech, and then demand that the other agree with what we have said. We have lost the ability to engage in proper debate and to treat each other with even basic respect. A good number of pundits and academics celebrated with glee the first anniversary of the assassination of Charlie Kirk yesterday, calling it the “Kirk-aversery”. We have forgotten.

I wouldn’t be a very good pastor if I merely observed these things without offering some way to correct them. First, Jesus commands us in Matthew 5:44 to love our enemies and pray for those who persecute us. In Romans 12:19 - 21, St. Paul instructs believers not to take revenge, because vengeance belongs to God. He also reminds us that we must to show kindness by feeding a hungry enemy or giving them water instead of abusing them. And he states that you should defeat evil through good actions rather than matching hostility. Paul is not referring to enemies that we meet in physical battle, but in spiritual battle and that is precisely the sort of battle we find ourselves in today.

This is not a civil dispute among fellow countrymen. It’s a war between diametrically opposed worldviews which cannot peacefully coexist with one another. One side will win, and one side will lose. Our Christian faith requires us to love our enemies and pray for those who curse us. It does not require us to stand idly by in the midst of savagery and barbarism, in fact, the opposite is true. We must use every tool at our disposal to fight against the ideologies that threaten the good things in this world. We must be well-informed on the issues that are at play in our society and make sure to support the people and efforts who are actually trying to do what is right, and good, and beautiful. We are morally obligated to exercise our right to vote and to vote for those people and measures that support and defend the dignity of the human person and not those who abuse that dignity for their own ends.

Some of you will say that I have no business as a priest to be commenting on these issues but I will say to you, if I fail to speak these things to you, things that I know to be true, I am failing you as your pastor and failing the very thing that God has called me to do, to lead you to the Truth and to Salvation. We must begin to pray for the conversion of the world and to work always for the greater Glory of God and not for the world, lest we forget.

Blessings,

Fr. Jeff Core

HAVE YOU HEARD ABOUT ST. HILDEGARD OF BINGEN?

St. Hildegard of Bingen was a 12th-century Benedictine nun who had extraordinary visions. She wrote about these visions in theological books, and she used them as inspiration for compositions. She founded her own abbey, created her own language, and wrote one of the first musical plays. She was a wonderful composer who set her own lushly poetic texts. So when you hear her music on YouTube or on a CD, it’s probably not what it sounded like during Hildegard’s time. The term tabula rasa, blank slate, is used for her music. People then hang their own musical ideas on this blank slate. Once at a modern performance of her music 14 different recordings of Hildegard were played, and the audience assumed they were all separate pieces. But they were really the same composition, in wildly different performances. That’s how freely modern musicians approach these works.

What’s inspiring about her life story?

She was 42 before she started writing anything down. In a sense, she is the patron saint of “late bloomers.” Interestingly enough, that slow start is typical of many women who are initially not confident in their abilities. It’s only as they get older and gain more confidence that they start really making a mark in the world.

Hildegard was also someone who didn’t accept her place in the world. She wrote her books, and created a new language, and, in a male-dominated church, she went on preaching tours at a time when women were not supposed to preach, especially in public. She refused to behave in a certain way. She wrote at a time when, if the church authorities had not thought she was divinely inspired, she could easily have been put to death as a heretic.

THE EXALTAION OF THE HOLY CROSS

The significance of the Exaltation of the Holy Cross, celebrated on September 14th, lies in honoring the cross as the sacred instrument of Christ's sacrifice and humanity's salvation.

Spiritual Meaning

Triumph of Love: The cross transformed from a brutal Roman tool of shame and torture into a universal symbol of hope, victory over sin, and eternal life.

Focus on Christ: Honoring the cross is an indirect way of adoring Jesus Christ Himself, acknowledging the price paid for human redemption.

Embracing Suffering: Christians are reminded to unite their own daily hardships with the sacrifice of Jesus.

The annual feast marks three major historical events in Christian tradition

- Discovery of the True Cross (326 AD): St. Helena, mother of Emperor Constantine, reportedly found the wooden cross of Jesus buried in Jerusalem.
- Dedication of the Basilica (335 AD): The Church of the Holy Sepulchre was consecrated on the site of Christ's tomb, where the relic was first lifted up ("exalted") for the faithful to venerate.
- Recovery of the Relic (628 AD): The Byzantine Emperor Heraclius successfully returned the cross to Jerusalem after it had been captured by the Persians.
